A 250th anniversary is the semiquincentennial.

Framingham is named for Framlingham, England. The omission of the L may have been a clerical error. Framingham was incorporated in 1700.

The Warren Clock Company, later Telechron, was based in Ashland from 1912 to 1992. Ashland's nickname is Clocktown.

In 1846, 1,666 acres of Holliston was ceded to form part of the Town of Ashland.

The Dimock Health Center in Boston is named for Dr. Susan Dimock, a one-time resident of Hopkinton. She earned her medical degree in Zurich in 1871 and is recognized as one of the first female surgeons in America.

Natick is the birthplace of modern baseball and the site of the first baseball factory in the United States.

The Redstone Schoolhouse was moved from Sterling to its site in Sudbury in 1926. It is believed to be the setting for "Mary Had a Little Lamb".

From 1955 to 1974 Wayland housed a Nike missile base on Oxbow Road — one of only three Boston-area sites.
