- Early inhabitants: The Winnebago people were the original inhabitants of the Maple Grove area. They were relocated to the area by the Federal Government in the mid-1800s.
- European settlers: The first European settlers arrived in Maple Grove in 1851. These settlers, Louis Gervais and Pierre Bottineau, laid the groundwork for the community that would become Maple Grove.
- City incorporation: Maple Grove was incorporated as a city in 1954.
 This was a pivotal moment in the city's history, as it allowed Maple Grove to establish a structured government and begin planning for future growth.
- Maple syrup production: The city was named for its large stands of maple trees, which were a significant source of maple syrup in the days.
- Rapid growth: Since the 1970s, Maple Grove has experienced rapid growth due to the completion and improvement of major highways like Interstates 94/694, 494, and U.S. Highway 169. This growth has transformed Maple Grove from a rural area into a thriving suburban city.
- Pierre Bottineau House: The Pierre Bottineau House is the oldest surviving structure in Maple Grove. Built in 1854, it was the first woodframe house built in Maple Grove Township. The house has been moved from its original location and is now located in Elm Creek Park Reserve.

- A Name Steeped in Native American Tradition: Osseo's name likely comes from the Ojibwe word "Waseia," signifying "there is light" or "Son of the Evening Star." The famed poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow even mentions Osseo in his epic poem "The Song of Hiawatha."
- Peacemaker on the Prairie: Pierre Bottineau, a French fur trader with strong ties to the Native American community, played a crucial role in Osseo's early history. He frequented the area, then known as Bottineau Prairie, and helped maintain peaceful relations between the settlers and the Dakota people.

- A Town with Two Namesakes: Believe it or not, Osseo wasn't always the sole name for the settlement. In 1856, when the town was being platted, a part of it was initially called "City of Attraction." This name, however, faded away, and Osseo prevailed.
- Potato Powerhouse: Spuds were a prominent agricultural product in Osseo's past. During its peak in 1928, Osseo boasted one of the largest potato markets in the entire Northwest! Daily shipments of up to 100 carloads of potatoes were sent from Osseo to larger cities.
- From Horse-Drawn Carriages to High-Speed Rails: Transportation in Osseo has come a long way. Originally, an old Native American trail served as the town's main street. This trail, eventually designated as Territorial Road, was paved in 1918. The arrival of the Great Northern Railroad in 1882 significantly impacted Osseo's growth and development.
- A Town Hall Steeped in History: The Osseo Town Hall, built in 1901, stands as a testament to the community's past. This structure served not only as a governmental building but also as a social hub, hosting various events and gatherings for residents.
